

Green Value Stream Mapping

A Systematic Approach to Sustainable Development

11th July 2013, Johannesburg

Quick Overview

Lean Thinking has taught us to interrogate our business methods, by learning to see our value streams from the perspective of the Customer, and recognising how our processes deliver value into their hands. Green Thinking requires that we take this one step further, by understanding the perspective of the environment, while continually improving our processes to deliver value to customers in an environmentally sustainable way.

Learn to visualise the Current State, seek out and measure Green Waste and develop a Future Green Vision. We will guide you to convert your findings and decisions into a comprehensive, yet realistic implementation plan.

This workshop focuses on manufacturing, although the approach and a selection of examples will apply to service-related environments.

Key Topics Covered

- Clear Direction and Strategic Green Thinking
- The Seven Green Wastes
- Green Value Stream Mapping
- Green Change Planning & Execution
- Linking Green Thinking to Financial Performance

Business Outcomes

- A systematic approach to meet environmental objectives that support bottom-line improvement
- Clarity on the Current State and opportunities for Green Improvements
- A blueprint for improvement to translate the Future Green Vision into actions
- A means to deliver on the company strategy, as well as extending to external suppliers & service providers
- Improvement of the organisation's image, both internally and externally

Target Audience

- Managers, Executives, Change Agents & Continuous Improvement Facilitators
- Health, Safety & Environmental Specialists
- Individuals seeking knowledge on Green Value Stream Mapping and the delivery of sustainable improvement projects

Duration

This workshop is run over a 1-day period, 0800 to 1700

Included

Relevant course material and certificate of attendance

Contact us at info@thinkingpeople.co.za for more information or a quotation

www.thinkingpeople.co.za